Client Profile: Geoffrey Mazel

I am pleased to profile my good friend Geoff Mazel in this edition of the newsletter. Geoff is a partner in the Manhattan law firm of Hankin, Handwerker & Mazel and is a widely respected and well known expert in Cooperative and Condominium law. Geoff's practice is primarily devoted to real estate, with a concentration in the representation of Boards of Cooperative and Condominium corporations.

Geoff is a graduate of St. Johns University School of Law and has been a member of the New York Bar since 1987. After spending a number of years as a partner in a law firm in downtown Manhattan, Geoff and his partners founded Hankin, Handwerker & Mazel in 2002.

He currently represents over 7,000 units of cooperative and condominium housing located in the various boroughs of New York City and Long Island. He is also a member of the prestigious Bar Association of the City of New York Cooperative and Condominium Committee, which is responsible for assisting in the drafting of new legislation and practitioner forms for use in Cooperative and Condominium related matters. In addition he has published many articles in the field of Cooperative law and has lectured before the Bar and numerous trade associations on issues of importance.

Geoff is not only a great attorney but a great resource for any type of legal matter. He is always there for me when I need advice on a legal matter, a form or a referral to someone he knows. If you have a client or matter that involves an area of law within Geoff's area of expertise please feel free to call on him. You will be glad you did.
